Ann Drendel-Haas

Ann Drendel-Haas is a native of Reno, Nevada and spent her early professional career as a child development specialist, special education teacher and education coordinator of services for adolescents receiving in-patient mental health treatment. In addition to serving as a mediator and IEP facilitator for the Nevada Department of Education, Ann currently serves as a mediation coordinator for the Neighborhood Mediation Center in Reno, Nevada. She provides facilitative, mediation services in both Reno and Sparks Justice Courts on a wide variety of community issues. Prior to her service with the Neighborhood Mediation Center, Ann was a statewide special education consultant for the Nevada Department of Education and an area administrator of special education services at the county/LEA level. In addition to her state and county special education experience, Ann also brings the family perspective to her work after having successfully advocated for a family member's challenging transition from school to work. She is committed to a process that has the potential to resolve conflict when both parties make a good faith effort to be open-minded and listen to each other. It is her belief that facilitative mediation provides an opportunity for both parties of any dispute to be heard and find a workable solution.

Dr. Gretchen Greiner

Dr. Greiner retired as the Director of Instruction from the Elko County School District (ECSD) in 2001. Prior to that she was the Coordinator of Special Education Services for ECSD.
