

Human Services

SCED	Course Name	SCED Course Identifier Description	SCED Description
19262G0.5011 F	Consumer Economics / Personal Finance	Consumer Economics / Personal Finance	Consumer Economics, Personal Finance, and Economics courses provide students with a comprehensive understanding of personal financial management and economic principles. These courses emphasize lifespan goal-setting, individual and family decision-making, and consumer rights, while exploring the foundational concepts of microeconomics and the U.S. economic system. Students will delve into topics such as savings and investing, credit, insurance, taxes, social security, and budget planning, alongside an examination of contracts, consumer protection, and the effects of the global economy on consumers and families. The curriculum also covers macroeconomics, international economics, and comparative economics, presented in both theoretical and applied contexts, to equip students with the knowledge needed to be financially responsible and economically informed individuals. The course is needed as a Graduation Requirement.